FROM OUR CHIEF OF STAFF...

Longer ago than I like to remember, and certainly before I became the “World’s Oldest Millennial”, I taught high school seniors and college students in Sunday School. One of my favorite tactics was to ask “TSSQ’s” (Trick Sunday School Questions), and my favorite question was “Would you feel comfortable calling God a liar? I always got re-sounding “NO’s” when this question was asked, and then we would spend sometime talking about how our actions and lifestyles some time silently demonstrate that we indeed do not seem to believe Biblical truths and that God was indeed not truthful.

One Sunday a student (I do not remember which one) asked about giving of “first fruits” mentioned many places in the Bible. I realized that I had just been asked a TSSQ, and I was acting as if God was a liar. I gave regularly and soon tithed on a regular basis, but I was not offering these as “first fruits” as God has commanded both Israel and us to do. I made my offering to God AFTER the bills were paid, and I would sometimes skip a month and catch up later. I was acting as if God had not truly meant that He would take care of and bless us if we followed His instructions concerning all things in our life.

My testimony to you is that God has been faithful, and I have been able to pay my bills. No, he hasn’t given me a Cadillac or made me fabulously wealthy. He has blessed my life beyond belief and provided me with a godly woman as a wife who keeps me from doing stupid things while making my life full.

Would you be comfortable calling God a liar?
